Apollo Set To Blast Into Lunar Orbit

World Waits

To See Armstrong Touch Moon

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — We are going to see a vast wasteland and it will be television's finest moment.

We will see a white boot coming down nine steps of a ladder a minute at a time, and we will be along for man's biggest

We will see Neil A. Armstrong's foot stirring the moon's virgin dust, and nothing that has been said or written will compare.

The space agency's final Apollo 11 lunar surface operations plan says, "The primary purpose of the TV is to provide a supplemental real time data source to assure or enhance the scientific and operational data return.

But that's not all. It is there to let us see that size 91/2 boot crunch into the sur. face. It is there to make up for the fact that we didn't see the Nina, the Pinta and the Santa Maria making the landfall, or Lewis and Clark paddle up the Missouri, or Lindbergh or Byrd or Perry when they changed history.

It is there because John F. Kennedy said, "Whatever mankind must undertake, free men must fully share."

In the quiet way that has marked them as men of serious intent, the Apollo 11 astronauts invited us along Friday as they opened the passageway into the strange-looking ship in which

Soviet Spacecraft Luna Changes Course At Moon

JORDELL BANK England (AP) - Jordell Bank astronomers said the Soviet unmanned Luna 15 probe changed its orbit significantly this afternoon after circling the moon in an unaltered course for more than two Scientists speculated that the probe may have been sent on its way back to earth. But they added this could not be confirmed.

JODRELL BANK, England, (AP) - Jodrell Bank Observatery said today the unmanned Soviet spacecraft Luna 15 was still orbiting the moon, despite a temporary loss of signals that caused scientists here to speculate earlier it had changed

Observatory director Sir Bernard Lovell said signals from Luna 15 were received at 11:40 a.m. (6:40 EDT). He said the probe's two-hour path around the moon was unchanged.

In Moscow, Soviet space authorities continued the silence on Luna 15 that has been maintained since Thursday, when the announcement was made that it had started circling the moon.

Western scientific experts here have cautioned against assuming that the prolonged lack of new activity necessarily means the spaceship has failed The Soviet sources here said today that now an attempt will

Wetzel Says Beaver Park To Get Funds

LISBON-Rep. Clarence Wetzel today expressed confidence more than $400,000 will be made available by Ohio authorities for Beaver Creek State Park.

Wetzel said the capital improvements bill approved by the House Thursday did not originally include the park money, which is another fund. Reports from Columbus indicated the $400,000 had been cut from the Columbiana County's share of the capital improvements funds provided by the 1968 bond issue action.

However, Wetzel maintained the park money is in another fund and will be made available. He said he conferred yesterday by telephone with Henry Hall of the land purchase office of the Department of Natural Resources, who said he believes the money would be allotted.

Wetzel said an additional $132,000 of funds slated for expenditure at the park two years ago also will be cleared for use, making a total of $532,000 for the park.

The representative has been ailing since June, and has not been able to attend sessions of the legislature.

Suffer No Losses In 4-Hour Battle Near Tay Ninh City

SAIGON (AP) - American troops killed 27 enemy soldiers but suffered no casualties in a four-hour battle near Tay Ninh City, 50 miles northwest of Saigon, military spokesmen said

The fight six miles northeast of the key provincial capital, which allied intelligence says may be the main target of a new enemy drive, was the only major disruption reported as the battlefield lull entered its fifth week.

The battle Friday involved troops of the 25th Infantry Division. Later, B52 bombers struck around Tay Ninh and at enemy positions at the base of Black Virgin Mountain.

South Vietnam President Nguyen Van Thieu, answering questions at a news conference, said he did not believe U.S and South Vietnamese policymakers should read any political implications into the battlefield lull. He said the Communists have decreased their battlefield activity many times, three or four times this year alone, but only to rest and re-equip their forces. Thieu also said that a "very important part" of U.S. troops could be withdrawn from Vietnam only if sufficient U.S. equipment and funds are forthcoming. He also said he would do all he could so that South Vietnamese troops could "replace" American troops. Thieu's opinion of the lull was in accord with the expressed views of most American commanders in Saigon. They believe the Communist command is girding for another "high point" in its sporadic summer campaign.

After the news conference, Thieu met with Gen. Earle Wheeler, chairman of the U.S. (Turn to VIETNAM, Page 5)

LISBON-Rep. Clarence Wetzel today expressed confidence more than $400,000 will be made available by Ohio authorities for Beaver Creek State Park. Wetzel said the capital improvements bill approved by the House Thursday did not originally include the park money, which is another fund.

Reports from Columbus indicated the $400,000 had been cut from the Columbiana County's share of the capital improvements funds provided by the 1968 bond issue action

However, Wetzel maintained the park money is in another fund and will be made available. He said he conferred yesterday by telephone with Henry Hall of the land purchase office of the Department of Natural Resources, who said he believes the money would be allotted

Wetzel said an additional $132,000 of funds slated for expenditure at the park two years ago also will be cleared for use, making a total of $532,000 for the park.

The representative has been ailing since June, and has not been able to attend sessions of the legislature.

Ohio Joins N. Mexico In Wildlife Action

Ohio Atty. Gen. Paul W. Brown has joined New Mexico in a suit to prevent federal intrusion in state wildlife management programs.

New Mexico's game commission is asking the U.S. Supreme Court to reject a lower court decision which allows the federal government to kill resident species of wildlife as part of an ecological study.

"This becomes a question of protection of state's rights," said Brown. "We are joining in the suit because of the possibility of encroachment on Ohio's game programs by the federal

YEAST SEPTIC TANK

Dating from Biblical days, yeast has been one of nature's most valuable aids, yet was an enigma. Yeast's ability to create reactions in hops and other fermentable materials was a mystery which baffled chemists over the centuries, and only in recent years have our modern scientists discovered that yeast cells produce enzymes which affect starches and sugars, creating alcohol as one of the end products. This is why yeast is so invaluable to the brewing

Yeast also has many other uses, such as the leavening of bread, etc., and, in the past, has been used widely as an aid to the operation of septic tanks. Even today, many rural home owners persist in the addition of yeast to their sewage sys-To understand the effect of veast on a sewage system. it must be clearly understood that THE ENZYMES IN YEAST WILL ONLY WORK ON STARCHES AND SUGARS. In the early part of this century, home baking and canning contributed greatly to the starch and sugar content of sewage waste, and the addition of yeast was of some definite advantage. However, today's housewife purchases most of her bread, cake and canned foods from the market and studies of the nature of today's waste show a marked IN-CREASE in fats and greases, with a DECREASE in sugars and starches. The addition of quantities of yeast to today's system can actually create graymailed, perhaps. YEAST AND YOUR SEPTIC TANK

Dating from Biblical days, yeast has been one of nature's most valuable aids, yet was an enigma. Yeast's ability to create reactions in hops and other fermentable materials was a mystery which baffled chemists over the centuries, and only in recent years have our modern scientists discovered that yeast cells produce enzymes which affect starches and sugars, creating alcohol as one of the end products. This is why yeast is so invaluable to the brewing industry.

Yeast also has many other uses, such as the leavening of bread, etc., and, in the past, has been used widely as an aid to the operation of septic tanks. Even today, many rural home owners persist in the addition of yeast to their sewage sys-To understand the effect of

must be clearly understood that THE ENZYMES IN YEAST WILL ONLY WORK ON STARCHES AND SUGARS. In the early part of this century, home baking and canning contributed greatly to the starch and sugar content of sewage waste, and the addition of yeast was of some definite advantage. However, today's housewife purchases most of her bread, eake and canned foods from the market and studies of the nature of today's waste show a marked IN-CREASE in fats and greases, with a DECREASE in sugars and starches. Yeast also creates a gaseous condition which prevents the sewage from settling in the tank, and uses up valuable oxygen, necessary to bacterial digestion.

Prescription For AMA

Dr. Gerald D. Dorman spoke at the final session of the American Medical Association's annual convention in New York and had a sound piece of advice for his colleagues.

The AMA's new president said the medical profession must put its Medicaid house in order. He called for a campaign to find and condemn physicians who are cheating on Medicaid.

DR. DORMAN described the various forms of cheating as giving poor service, overcharging and charging for services not given.

"We have recommended," Dr. Dorman said, "that cheaters be prosecuted under the law whenever appropriate. The "national scandal" referred to by Dr. Dorman already is drawing heat. The Internal Revenue Service is planning to audit income tax returns of physicians who make more than $25,000 a year from Medicand or Medicare. Some state and local medical societies are considering plans to drop from care programs

THE BIG LOSERS in so many cases are the poor people who are denied adequate care care that the rest of America mistakenly believes it is providing. The medical care program Congress is attempting to provide for needy Americans will be in jeopardy unless the fraud can be purged from the ranks of the medical profession. That would be a national tragedy.

The AMA can be a help or a hinderance to achieving U.S. Medical goals. Hopefully, mebers will heed the words of their new president.

Water For St. Clair

Columbiana County authorities may now again seek to construct the proposed St. Clair Water System which has been delayed by a group of residents for two years with court litigation.

Opponents of the project claimed the anticipated expense and assessments were too high, and some said they did not even need a water

Few can argue against honest efforts by citizens to block needless projects which have exorbitant costs, and the proper legal redress is available in our courts.

We have consistently maintained that construction of an adequate system for the St. Clair area is a worthwhile investment for all the residents, in terms of a safe, dependable water supply, fire protection and, most of all, as a spur to residential, commercial and industrial development. But we have respected the attempts by those sincere foes of the plan who thought water could be obtained more econom-

Now the paths to justice seem to have been explored, and the County Commissioners are preparing to seek bids.

In view of all the obstacles which have been placed in the way of this important project, we hope good fortune may smile on the further efforts to provide the one major means of having the district north of the city achieve its full potential.

Park Money Priority Needed

Although the status of funds for enlargement of Beaver Creek State Park seems to be confused this weekend, there are indications that the money will be spent for acquiring property

Some $400,000 designated for the park was not included in the capital improvements measure approved by the House Thursday and sent to the Senate. However, Rep. Clarence Wetzel of Lisbon maintains the money was not originally included in the capital improvements bill, and is still set for the 1970-71 budget. Whatever the source of money for park development, we believe it to be an absolute obligation of the legislators to insure appropriation of the funds.

Expansion of the park as a key recreation area for southeastern Ohio is important to the whole region, and development of its resources and protection of the natural beauty from the ravages of timber cutting, exploitation and pollution has too long been delayed.

We hope state authorities very soon will be able to say, without qualification, ample money, including unexpended funds from two years ago, will be used during the next bienium to expand Beaver Creek State Park.

Homestead Exemption Chance

The Ohio Senate again is leading the fight for a homestead tax exemption for retired persons over 65 years of age who live in their homes more than six months a year.

The Senate-approved resolution further stipulates retirees whose annual incomes exceed $5,000 would not be eligible and the exemption would be no more than $5,000 of assessed valua-

If the House goes along with the Senate proposal, the issue would go on the November ballot since it is a constitutional amendment.

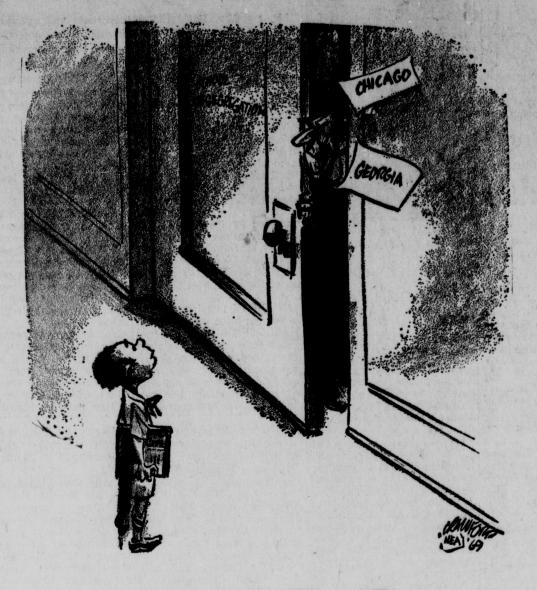

WE BELIEVE the homestead tax exemption would bring relief to numerous Ohioans on fixed incomes and urge members of the House to vote to put the question on the ballot.

year by removing specific restrictions that would have opened the door for the legislature to grant homestead exemptions to anyone it desired, not just retired citizens.

UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES, its defeat by a substantial margin last November came as no surprise. This newspaper favors homestead exemption legislation but opposed State Issue 2 because of its broad language

The House should follow the Senate's example and give Ohio voters a chance at a reasonable exemption proposal.

'Go Back To Your Own School And Study History-Rome Wasn't Built In A Day!

Philosophy For All

By Jenkins Jones

I am now farther out than most astronauts as a result of reading a press release about a speech delivered July 5 by Robert Maynard Hutchins, president of the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions.

Appropriately, he gave it in the rarefied atmosphere of the Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies. I went to one of these Aspen brainbashes once and had my horizons stretched so far I couldn't find them. It was a wonderfully ennobling experience except when Saul Alindky and I got jawing about whether black power was any nobler than white power.

Anyway, the press release says here:

"HUTCHINS PICTURED the world as drifting into a post-Industrial Era in which science, technology and the computer, not man's labor, will produce wealth and prosperity. In such an era, the jobs below middle management will be unnecessary; man will be freed from work to face the problem of leisure.

"This new era will usher in a world community to replace the anachronistic nation-state. The nation-state now stands as an impediment to the growth of worldwide corporations; in addition, its purpose, to protect its people economically and physically, cannot be carried out in the present age of multinational corporations and nuclear bombs.

community is the only solution. 'The industrial system now makes the world-state necessary, said Hutchins."

Self-confessed intellectuals are like airplanes. While groundlings struggle to bridge the rivers, fill the chasms and climb the hills, the plane soars above it all.

People of low mentality may wonder how you apportion the world legislature, what you do about the flow of hundreds of millions from overpopulated lands to those more blessed, and why the disorganized societies, which comprise a majority of the world's population, won't simply cut themselves in on the fruits of prosperous nations. All this is beneath the notice of cosmic thinkers

Dr. Hutchins' worry about what everybody except "middle management" will do with all the leisure is predicted on the brave new world when robots will plow, sow, harvest, bake and deliver, and the vast majority of us will sit around eating and wondering whether to whittle But if management has to design the machines, plan the factories and push the buttons, it is going to demand a fat piece of the pie because no one is going to knock himself out if he's rewarded right along with the sitters.

The old hobos sang of "The Big Rock Candy Mountain," and Mr. Hutchins wonders how to sell high philosophy to the masses who will be floating around in "al lake of stew and of whisky, too." Again, quoting the press release:

"The aims of today's education do not fit man into this future. The purpose of education

now is to serve the industrial nation-state by training people for roles in an industrial society. These roles will become obsolete.

"Education must begin to give men understanding rather than usefulness. Hutchins proposed centers of independent thought, true universities which will be the focus for the unending education of each man. Humanity will then be prepared for manhood, not as manpower."

Unfortunately, people who hate to work and who would cork off fastest if a robot showed up to serve them are generally those who would have most difficulty with "centers of independent thought." In any age, philosophers are outnumbered by just plain beer-drinkers 50-1.

Now and then, of course, you come across a real dope-off who digs high thought. Take Diogenes, that Greek burn who lived in a barrel. But at least he rustled his own barrel and his groceries were given to him by people like Alexander the Great who came from far and wide to listen to his wisecracks. He was a self-supporting tramp.

THESE MODERN HIPPIE-TYPES want airconditioned barrels furnished by the govern-ment. It's sort of chilling to think that when Mr. Hutchins' everything-for-everybody worldstate rolls around we could all be sitting in hippievilles, listening to gurus preparing us not for usefulness but for understanding, and learning to roll grass fags one-handed

A normal beehive consists of one queen, a handful of drones and jillions of workers. As Hutchins sees man's future, we'll have one queen, a handful of workers and jillions of drones. I'd bet that the bees will be around

Secretary Speaks Out

WASHINGTON — Despite all the rhetorical outbursts on the subject of "commitments" abroad which lately have been coming from members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the facts of international life today are catching up with the theorists who think the United States can forget about military support for peoples in distant lands.

Melvin Laird, who used to be a member of Congress and now is secretary of defense, has had a chance to get a look from the inside at what the dangers are to the United States.

This is why, in his testimony on Tuesday before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in support of an authorization of $375 million for military help abroad, he told some unpleasant but significant truths.

THE SECRETARY POINTED OUT that the Moscow government is moving into various parts of the world either to stir up trouble or to arm potential allies. He said:

"The Soviet Union continues to employ mili-tary assistance as a basic instrument of political infiltration. Soviet arms deliveries have raised concern about the level of armaments in the horn of Africa, as well as in the Middle East and North Africa.

The Soviet Union has been the principal supplier of arms to India. Recent reports indicate that it is shipping weapons to Pakistan as well.

"There is little doubt in my mind that military assistance will continue to be used as a major instrument of Soviet policy over the foreseeable future." Secretary Laird declared, moreover, that "it would be foolhardy to expect early abatement of fear of aggression in Europe" and that he sees in prospect a continued instability in Asia.

He added: "In Latin America and Africa, there is a constant threat of terrorism, guerrilla warfare and insurgency. Amother very troublesome area with serious implications for our arms transfer policy is the Mediterranean Basin. Soviet naval operations have steadily accelerated in the Mediterranean Sea, being at a higher level in 1969 than in either of the two preceding record The Soviet Union, of course, is not the only troublemaker. The Red Chinese government is supporting insurgency movements and revolutions in the Far East and elsewhere. Secretary Laird stressed the importance of giving aid to countries which can help themselves so far as the development on defense forces is concerned but which need advisers and require assistance in getting the latest

Mr. Laird believes that building up the defense of countries like Greece, Turkey, South Korea and Formosa "greatly reduces the size of U.S. forces that would otherwise have to be stationed overseas to support our forward defense strategy." The United States, incidentally, is trying a very important experiment now in Vietnam by assisting in the training and equipping of a large army of South Vietnamese.

If similar aid could be given to other countries which wish to remain independent and to become strong enough to resist aggression, the total cost of the United States would be relatively small in comparison with the sacrifice in American lives that might otherwise be made.

Plenty of manpower is available in other countries but aid must be provided by those nations which have the financial and industrial resources as well as the technicians to furnish ad-

FOR. AS SECRETARY LAIRD said, the Soviet threat can best be countered by assistance "to countries that seek to maintain peace, that have the determination to resist external aggression or internal subversion, and that need our help.'

Isolationism can hardly be justified, therefore, as a policy for the United States as long as the Soviet Union is engaged in a worldwide conspiracy which can plunge this nation at any moment into a nuclear war.

Rarely has anyone in the executive branch of our government spoken out as frankly as has Mr. Laird concerning the Soviet menace. This in itself is a constructive change.

"Ah, that's different. If we contaminate the earth with germs, everyone understands that we are only defending ourselves from the other side. But if we brought back moon germs and something happened, no one would forgive us."

Prescription For AMA

Dr. Gerald D. Dorman spoke at the final session of the American Medical Association's annual convention in New York and had a sound piece of advice for his colleagues.

The AMA's new president said the medical profession must put its Medicaid house in order. He called for a campaign to find and condemn physicians who are cheating on Medicaid.

DR. DORMAN described the various forms of cheating as giving poor service, overcharging and charging for services not given

"We have recommended," Dr. Dorman said, "that cheaters be prosecuted under the law whenever appropriate."

The "national scandal" referred to by Dr. Dorman already is drawing heat. The Internal Revenue Service is planning to audit income tax returns of physicians who make more than $25,000 a year from Medicaid or Medicare.

Some state and local medical societies are considering plans to drop from care programs any physicians found to be cheating.

We agree with Dr. Dorman that the wrongdoing of a few doctors should not reflect upon the many hard-working, devoted and honest physi-

We also agree that the crooks should be rooted out and appropriate action taken against

At stake here is not just the image of the medical profession. Nor is our resentment aroused entirely because it is taxpayer money that is being bilked by supposedly professional

THE BIG LOSERS in so many cases are the poor people who are denied adequate care care that the rest of America mistakenly believes it is providing.

The medical care program Congress is attempting to provide for needy Americans will be in jeopardy unless the fraud can be purged from the ranks of the medical profession. That would be a national tragedy.

The AMA can be a help or a hinderance to achieving U.S. Medical goals. Hopefully, mebers will heed the words of their new president.

Water For St. Clair

Columbiana County authorities may now again seek to construct the proposed St. Clair Water System which has been delayed by a group of residents for two years with court litigation.

Opponents of the project claimed the anticipated expense and assessments were too high, and some said they did not even need a water

Few can argue against honest efforts by citizens to block needless projects which have exorbitant costs, and the proper legal redress is available in our courts.

We have consistently maintained that construction of an adequate system for the St. Clair area is a worthwhile investment for all the residents, in terms of a safe, dependable water supply, fire protection and, most of all, as a spur to residential, commercial and industrial development. But we have respected the attempts by those sincere foes of the plan who thought water could be obtained more econom-

Now the paths to justice seem to have been explored, and the County Commissioners are preparing to seek bids.

In view of all the obstacles which have been placed in the way of this important project, we hope good fortune may smile on the further efforts to provide the one major means of having the district north of the city achieve its full potential.

Park Money Priority Needed

Although the status of funds for enlargement of Beaver Creek State Park seems to be confused this weekend, there are indications that the money will be spent for acquiring property for the scenic area

Some $400,000 designated for the park was not included in the capital improvements measure approved by the House Thursday and sent

However, Rep. Clarence Wetzel of Lisbon maintains the money was not originally included in the capital improvements bill, and is still set for the 1970-71 budget. Whatever the source of money for park development, we believe it to be an absolute obligation of the legislators to insure appropriation of the funds.

Expansion of the park as a key recreation area for southeastern Ohio is important to the whole region, and development of its resources and protection of the natural beauty from the ravages of timber cutting, exploitation and pollution has too long been delayed.

We hope state authorities very soon will be able to say, without qualification, ample money, including unexpended funds from two years ago, will be used during the next bienium to expand Beaver Creek State Park.

Homestead Exemption Chance

Is Confusion Complete?

The Ohio Senate again is leading the fight for a homestead tax exemption for retired persons over 65 years of age who live in their homes more than six months a year.

'Go Back To Your Own School And Study History-Rome Wasn't Built In A Day!"

Philosophy For All

By Jenkins Jones

I am now farther out than most astronauts as a result of reading a press release about a speech delivered July 5 by Robert Maynard Hutchins, president of the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions.

Appropriately, he gave it in the rarefied atmosphere of the Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies. I went to one of these Aspen brainbashes once and had my horizons stretched so far I couldn't find them. It was a wonderfully ennobling experience except when Saul Alindky and I got jawing about whether black power was any nobler than white power.

Anyway, the press release says here:

"HUTCHINS PICTURED the world as drifting into a post-Industrial Era in which science, technology and the computer, not man's labor, will produce wealth and prosperity. In such an era, the jobs below middle management will be unnecessary; man will be freed from work to face the problem of leisure.

"This new era will usher in a world community to replace the anachronistic nation-state. The nation-state now stands as an impediment to the growth of worldwide corporations; in addition, its purpose, to protect its people economically and physically, cannot be carried out in the present age of multinational corporations and nuclear bombs.

"All crises now become world crises; a world community is the only solution. 'The industrial system now makes the world-state necessary, said Hutchins.'

Self-confessed intellectuals are like airplanes. While groundlings struggle to bridge the rivers, fill the chasms and climb the hills, the plane soars above it all.

People of low mentality may wonder how you apportion the world legislature, what you do about the flow of hundreds of millions from overpopulated lands to those more blessed, and why the disorganized societies, which comprise a majority of the world's population, won't simply cut themselves in on the fruits of prosperous nations. All this is beneath the notice of cosmic thinkers

Dr. Hutchins' worry about what everybody except "middle management" will do with all the leisure is predicted on the brave new world when robots will plow, sow, harvest, bake and deliver, and the vast majority of us will sit around eating and wondering whether to whittle

But if management has to design the machines, plan the factories and push the buttons, it is going to demand a fat piece of the pie because no one is going to knock himself out if he's rewarded right along with the sitters.

The old hobos sang of "The Big Rock Candy Mountain," and Mr. Hutchins wonders how to sell high philosophy to the masses who will be floating around in "al lake of stew and of whisky, too." Again, quoting the press release:

"The aims of today's education do not fit man into this future. The purpose of education

now is to serve the industrial nation-state by training people for roles in an industrial society. These roles will become obsolete

"Education must begin to give men understanding rather than usefulness. Hutchins proposed centers of independent thought, true universities which will be the focus for the unending education of each man. Humanity will then be prepared for manhood, not as manpower." Luke tells us in Luke 23: 42, 43, 'And he said unto Jesus, Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom. And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise." People will thus reason that they want to be saved just like this thief. They reason to them-selves that this thief was saved by just believing. They say that he was saved without ever being baptized and so they also can be saved without being baptized.

Becky is a water baby-one part mermaid, three parts fish. We took her to the lake this summer, and she splashed and tumbled in the water joyously. I had to watch her every minute. I finally had to take her out by force—much to her consternation and objection. It took some doing to distract her.

Actually, it's relatively simple to comfort a small child whose wishes have been thwarted. A toy, a cookie, sometimes a loving hug will turn the trick.

But how about grown-up frustrations? When sick with disappointment, heartbroken or dejected by a bad turn of events, where can an adult turn for consolation and support?

God's Church is the mainstay to every situation. Radiating God's goodness, it offers reassurance and relief to the baffled and the hopeless. Men turning toward its promise find new confidence and faith and hope recovered.

Becky is a water baby-one part mermaid, three parts fish. We took her to the lake this summer, and she splashed and tumbled in the water joyously. I had to watch her every minute. I finally had to take her out by force—much to her consternation and objection. It took some doing to distract her.

Actually, it's relatively simple to comfort a small child whose wishes have been thwarted. A toy, a cookie, sometimes a loving hug will turn the trick.

Early Delegates Of IBOP Hopped Freights Due To Hard Times In Labor Organization

By ROBERT POPP

Seventy-five years ago, in the midst of a strike and a "panic"—the euphemism for what today is called a depression—the struggling union was in such dire straits that its president had gone unpaid for four months and its national treasurer hopped a freight to travel from Kittanning to East Liverpool for a convention.

Those are some of the colorful sidelights on the early days of the union related in a 78-page book written by T. J. Duffy, secretary and later president of what was originally known as the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters.

Duffy wrote the history in 1901, when the struggling union at last had reached a point where its survival seemed assured. It was published in book form in 1939 in the plant at the Potters Herald, the union's official newspaper. It's called "An Early History of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters.'

Today's potters, sons, daughters, grandsons and granddaughters of the men who laid the groundwork for the union nearly 78 years ago, travel from coast-to-coast in jet planes to attend international conventions, living in $18-a-day hotel rooms and basking in the sunshine around the swimming pool in a resort city during recesses in the proceedings.

But at the so-called strike convention in East Liverpool in July, 1894, two of the local unions reported they were "too poor to send delegates." The treasurer's report showed absolutely no funds. A. S. Hughes, the president, had been paid no salary for more than four months. Samuel Eardley, the national treasurer, hopped a freight from Kittanning to get to the meeting and several other delegates also rode the rods, Duffy's history relates.

T. J. Duffy, early president of the pottery union, wrote a history of the labor organization in 1901.

PRIOR TO formation of the Brotherhood in 1890, the potters were organized loosely into what was known as District 160 of the old Knights of Labor. But labor trouble in 1882 had almost wiped out unionism in East Liverpool. Most potters were reluctant to admit they belonged to the organi-

The question of withdrawing from the Knights of Labor and forming a separate potters' union first was raised during the K. of L. convention in Trenton in September 1890. The proposal was defeated in a floor vote, but the idea remained with the delegates from Ohio, West Virginia and Pennsylvania as they returned home.

Seven men from Wheeling, New Cumberland, Kittanning and Toronto met at Toronto on Nov. 1, 1890, to pursue the idea of setting up a separate organization. No definite action was taken, but another meeting was set for East Liverpool two weeks later.

The same group, less the Wheeling delegation, met in East Liverpool Nov. 15. A temporary organization was created and a convention was set for Dec. 29, also in East Liverpool. Committees to lay the groundwork for the convention were appointed on Dec. 6, and Andrew Brannen of New Cumberland was given credit for proposing the union's original name, National Brotherhood of Operative Potters.

HARRY LAYDEN of East Liverpool presided and Charles Dargue of Kittanning acted as secretary. The attendance to-taled 19. In addition to Layden, East Liverpool was represented by William Cassidy, James Grafton, C. J. Martin, James Hague, Moss Burford, James Darrah, Samuel Hanlon and William Benhight. Toronto, New Cumberland, Kittanning and Findlay also were represented.

The three-day convention adopted a constitution patterned mainly after the document of the American Flint Glass Workers Union. It set up five localis—No. 1, Toronto; No. 2, New Cumberland; No. 3, Kittanning; No. 4, East Liverpool, and Layden was elected the organization's president with Dargue as secretary. A. S. Hughes, later to play a very prominent role in the union's early years, was chosen vice president. The convention voted the president a $25 annual allowance and set up $6 for the secretary. The entire membership "would scarcely reach 200," Duffy wrote.

Layden, as the first president, worked diligently as an organizer, but to little avail. The New Cumberland local sent Oscar Boales here to aid Layden "but after a few days he returned to New Cumberland without having accomplished anything," Duffy wrote. Layden organized Local 6 among the Wheeling clayhands in April 1891 "but that was about the only perceptible progress that had been made when the second convention met in July of that year."

THE NBOP distributed 1,000 handbills inviting local potters to attend the convention, but only a few appeared. Steubenville potters had been on strike since 1889, and Findlay potters still were out in a dispute that began in 1890.

The convention returned Layden as president and set his pay at $50 a year. Layden organized Local 7 at Tiffin in October 1891, but died shortly afterward. The executive board then named John Hunter of New Cumberland as president. Dargue quit as secretary a short time later to operate a labor newspaper, and Charles McCauley was named to replace Hughes, the man who was to lead the fledgling union to firm ground, was named president during the convention of July 1892. He also was assigned organizer's duties, told to devote all his time to the Brotherhood's affairs and voted an $800-a-year salary. Hughes shortly organized Local 8 at Tiffin and reorganized Local 7 in the same community.

By Sept. 1, he was back in East Liverpool, canvassing trating task of attempting to enroll members. He succeeded in setting up Locals 9, 10, 11 and 12 by the following February, and by May 22 had organized Local 14 at Tiltonsville.

The Tiltonsville potters refused to accept the unlucky number 13 for their local and were assigned the designation Local 14. Hughes commented that he was grateful for their refusal, because the following Saturday the plant burned to the ground. He said he thought he might have been held responsible for having forced the unlucky number on the local.

HUGHES SUMMED up his frustrations in an address to the third convention here in July 1893. "To tell the truth, I have lost all faith in the majority of potters, especially in East Liverpool, I have received promises from men week after week, but they repeatedly broke their word. I have come to think that the pottiers want no organization. Hughes, elected president again over his own strenuous protests, found organizing work almost impossible because of the 1893 depression. The membership fell rapidly, and soon all the locals had disbanded except No. 4.

"By this time Hughes had become known to the manufacturers as well as the men, which only made his work more disagreeable, for the men would shun and avoid him as though he was an officer with a warrant for their arrest, Duffy wrote. "They considered themselves unfortunate if their employer caught them talking to Hughes."

Times were getting harder. The Wick China Co. in Kittanning told its employes they must accept a 15 per cent pay cut or allow the firm to retain 25 per cent of their wages against a promised boost in federal tariff rates. The demand brought on a strike.

Things were so bad in East Liverpool that the NBOP executive board met in December 1893 to vote on a motion to disband the organization. But Hughes and some others prevailed and the union was allowed to live.

BY THIS TIME, other plants had joined in the wage-withholding plan initiated in Kittanning. Manufacturers then proposed a wage reduction that ranged from 10 to 40 per cent, depending upon whether one accepted the view of management or the employes. The workers refused, which brought on a six-month strike.

Hard times brought more potters into the Brotherhood. New locals were formed, others were reorganized, because the union executive board had waived the initiation fee. Without money in its treasury, the NBOP created an East Liverpool relief committee that collected money, edibles and clothing and set up a "relief store" where the items could be distributed. Benefits were organized, and one wag suggested a baseball game between the union leaders and the

Then came the "strike convention" of 1894, when the delegates hopped freight trains to get to East Liverpool, and some locals said they could not send representatives because they had no money. While the convention was in session, Trenton potters accepted a 121/2 per cent wage reduction, ending their strike. East Liverpool potters, feeling defeated, capitulated a few days later. Many dropped out of the locals with the end of the walkout after learning they now were expected to pay dues and assessments. Hughes commented at the 1895 convention: "To judge by their actions, the potters appear to think that a union is a good thing to have in time of trouble, but something they have no need of in time of peace.'

HUGHES, NAMED again as president, continued his or-ganizing work. But "his only office was the Diamond and here he could be found almost every evening listening to some man's grievance or trying to infuse unionism into some of the indifferent potters," Duffy wrote. The union joined manufacturers in seeking a boost in ware tariffs, hoping increased domestic production would lead to restoration of the 12½ per cent cut from their w In its 1897 convention, the Brotherhood went to work in earnest seeking a uniform wage list-a standard pattern of rates for all plants. The union opened negotiations with the manufacturers. The upshot was a decision that agreement on a uniform list and the restoration of the 121/2 per cent pay cut would be deferred until after enactment of a new tariff

In December 1897, climax of three years of negotiations, Hughes persuaded the Trenton potters to give up their separate organization and come into the Brotherhood. "The consolidation of the eastern and western potters was the accomplishment of one of Hughes' greatest aims," Duffy wrote.

Locals 34, 35, 36 and 37 were formed at Trenton. The Allegheny Mountain range still is used as an arbitrary boundary line in the designation of "eastern" and

In the 1898 convention, the NBOP realigned its officers and executive board to take into account the recent consolidation with the eastern potters. It also voted to affiliate with the American Federation of Labor. Hughes reported 20 locals had been organized or reorganized in the preceding 12 months. The membership had doubled. Hughes was returned to the presidency.

THE UNION still was continuing its struggle for a uniform wage list. In early 1900, its committee presented manufacturers with a list of 1,200 items. The union and management spokesmen met at Pitisburgh to study the list. After four days' work, when only half the items had been discussed, the meeting adjourned.

Resuming negotiations in March, the representatives agreed on a uniform list in March 1900 and stipulated it would go into effect in May, covering 80 per cent of the generalware potteries in the U.S. They also set up an arbitration board, comprised of three manufacturers and three unionists, to settle all minor disputes. A local comprised of 39 Trenton jiggermen left the union rather than accept the rates, but the organization continued to grow steadily.

A. S. Hughes, elected president of the union in 1892, led the organization to a position of national strength.

At the 10th convention in Wheeling in July 1900, Hughes was able to announce the membership had gained 200 per cent in the preceding year. The last paragraphs of Duffy's history were written in early 1901. He looked forward to a bright future for the union.

"EVERY POTTER should be enrolled beneath its banner. so that we may be able to take advantage of each and every opportunity to better our condition," he wrote. "I do not mean that we should take undue advantage of our employers for I think our aim should be, and has been, to do justice to both manufacturer and operative.'

And he closed with a tribute to Hughes, who was still in the president's chair. "Having been forced to the helm, he accepted his position solely as a matter of duty, not desire, and his record is one of self-sacrifice and perseverance. Most men would have quailed before the conditions he met, but he faithfully continued at his post and no one will accuse him of ever being swayed by personal ambitions "As president, he has been faithful, modest and persevering, honest in his dealings with all, fearless and sincere in his efforts and those who know him speak highest of him and through his labors of the past. A. S. Hughes will always hold the respect of the members of the N.B.O.P.

A local comprised of 39 Trenton jiggermen left the union rather than accept the rates, but the organization continued to grow steadily.

A. S. Hughes, elected president of the union in 1892, led the organization to a position of national strength.

At the 10th convention in Wheeling in July 1900, Hughes was able to announce the membership had gained 200 per cent in the preceding year. The last paragraphs of Duffy's history were written in early 1901. He looked forward to a bright future for the union.

"EVERY POTTER should be enrolled beneath its banner, so that we may be able to take advantage of each and every opportunity to better our condition," he wrote. "I do not mean that we should take undue advantage of our employers for I think our aim should be, and has been, to do justice to both manufacturer and operative.

And he closed with a tribute to Hughes, who was still in the president's chair. "Having been forced to the helm, he accepted his position solely as a matter of duty, not desire, and his record is one of self-sacrifice and perseverance. Most men would have quailed before the conditions he met, but he faithfully continued at his post and no one will accuse him of ever being swayed by personal ambitions

'As president, he has been faithful, modest and persevering, honest in his dealings with all, fearless and sincere in his efforts and those who know him speak highest of him and through his labors of the past. A. S. Hughes will always hold the respect of the members of the N.B.O.P.

Tri-State Tour Tips

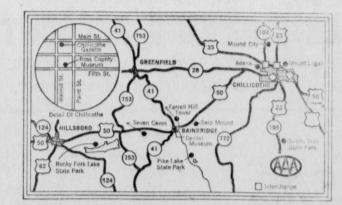

Between Chillicothe and Hillsboro in southern Ohio are many attractions for interesting, enjoyable tours. And, if time permits, they can be combined for a two or three day "mini - vacation."

Adena, at Chillicothe, is probably best known. Built in 1806 for Thomas Worthington, U. S. senator and later governor, the Georgian mansion, its outbuildings and grounds have been meticulously restored by the Ohio Historical Society. Tours run 9:30 to 4:30, except Monday. Admission, 50 cents; children, 6-12, 10 cents.

ALL boys—in fact the majority of them—aren't bad. Some may be more mischevious than others, and some seem to have an unusual knack of getting into trouble, but give them the opportunity and they usually can prove themselves worthy of

A group of boys from my neighborhood proved this when they camped at Beaver Creek State Park last week. They visited the park twice. They set up their own camp, did their own cooking and thoroughly enjoyed every moment of it.

There was no close adult supervision. They were on their own.

Now the meals they "enjoyed" might not be acceptable to most of us-for example a can of ravioli for breakfast-but they survived in good shape. And they weren't the cleanest bunch to look at. However, swimming daily in the creek kept the dirt at a minimum. Besides in the summer it usually is difficult to locate a clean boy.

I was pleased with the results of the camping trip made by this group. I visited their camp site twice. At first I was concerned about the haphazard look of the entire setup.

The second time around I and others attempted to help put things in order, but the campers seemed to want to do their own thing in their own way. It's a good way to learn, so they were left alone.

NATURALLY the camp rangers were concerned about a group of youngsters on their own in the area and made in-quiries of other campers on the behaviour of the novices. I'm happy to report the campers said the boys were no trou-ble, bothered nothing that didn't belong to them and observed

There was one experience none of them will forget. This was a visit from a four foot blacksnake. It came out of the woods, crawled to the rear of their tent and followed the outside edge. It came to the open door, crawled inside the tent and made an excursion around the interior.

By this time, the boys were screaming and dancing around like wildmen. The snake departed and then paused. One of the boys took all he could and decided to kick the snake. It coiled to strike and they all decided to get into the

USING ROCKS, which never struck, and sticks, which also did little good, they harried the snake around the area. Then one grabbed a forked stick and pinned the snake's head to the ground. Now the problem was what to do with it. By this time other campers investigated the commotion and one used an axe to relieve the snake of its head.

Sometimes it is awfully hard to bring one's self to trust youngsters. But, in the majority of the cases, they use better judgment than we give them credit for having.

Camping like this is one of the greatest experiences a boy can have. I am always pleased when I see boys enjoying the outdoors such as this and more so when I learn they have used better manners than many adults.

Whatever you save, it will be no bargain if you don't like camping—and some people don't. It takes longer to set up and break camp than it does to check in and out of motels.

And if it rains a great deal, you will be uncomfortable.

But if you like it—and thousands of families do—camping will not only save you money, but will add a new dimension to your vacation.

FISHING REPORT. Streams in the northern part of the state swollen by recent floods have still not returned to normal, but nevertheless some fishing success is still being reported, the Ohio Division of Wildlife says.

For Lake Erie, channel catfish are being taken in good numbers at Sandusky Bay Bridge and along Ohio 269, Ca-tawba Cliff, West Reef and Port Clinton Pier. White bass fishing is fair to good at Crib, Niagara, Toussaint and West Reef. Some walleye are being taken at Ruggles Beach and Reef. Perch fishing has been fair at Huron Pier, Sandusky Bay Fog Honor, Mouse Island and Catawba State Park.

Indian and Knox Lakes and Hoover Reservoir in Central Ohio are reported clear and normal with Hargus Lake ranging from roily to clear and normal. Muskie are beginning to bite at Hargue; good catches of crappies and bluegill are being made around brush piles at Hoover Reservoir, with crappies, bluegills, bass and channel catfish taking the bait at Indian Lake.

In Northwestern Ohio streams are generally roily and slightly above normal. The Maumee River near Grand Rapids, Weir Rapids and Independence State Park continues to produce good catches of channel catfish and a few northern pike. Other streams and lakes in the area are still producing catches ranging from smallmouth bass to a few walleye. At Clear Fork Reservoir white bass and a few muskie are going

IN NORTHEASTERN Ohio, walleye are hitting at Berlin Reservoir and at Pymatuning Reservoir, which is clear and high, bluegills, catfish and walleye are hitting on spinners Generally all lakes in southeastern Ohio are clear and normal although major streams remain high and muddy. Fishing is reported good at Piedmont Reservoir. THERE WAS a time when the "one telephone call" rule was common. It was common, too, for some police officers to deny an arrested person the right to see anyone until they were finished questioning him.

Now, Ohio law specifically says that a person under ar-rest may call his attorney or some other person, and his attorney must be allowed to see him immediately, whether or not the police have questioned him.

Associated Press Sorts Writer PHILADELPHIA (AP) -Tommy Jacobs, a casualty of the PGA-players war who al- Shippingport Wins most abandoned the pro tour because of poor play, is on a comeback—a comeback that's beginning to shape up.

"My game started going bad right after the U.S. Open in 1966," Jacobs said. "I haven't played well since June of that year. My game was a little bad -you can tell when it's happening—going into the Open.

"I was chairman of the tournament players' committee and slam homer in the first game right then all hell broke loose.

With my game going bad, that just helped it along."

But he started back this season and reached the high point of his comeback Friday when he valuted into the second-round lead of the heat-plagued $150,000 Philadelphia Golf Classic, shooting a 70 for 139. He held a two-stroke lead over six at 141. They are Lee Trevino, who took a double bogey six on the final hole for a 71; Grier Jones, 69; Dave Stockton, 70; Dean Refram, 70; Lou Graham, 73, and George Boutell, 70. Arnold Palmer moved into contention with a 69 despite heat he called "the worst I've seen since I've been playing golf." He was tied at 142—three strokes off the pace—with Bob-by Greenwood, Bob Stone, Dave Hill and Mac McLendon.

Shippingport defeated Hookstown 14-4 in the Southside Athletic Junior Division of Hot Stove League Friday night. George Walker, winning pitcher, fanned 10. Mickey Mehaffie had four hits for the winners.

Jacobs Fires 70, Takes Philly Lead With 139

By BOB GREEN Associated Press Sorts Writer by Greenwood, Bob Stone, Dave

PHILADELPHIA (AP) -Tommy Jacobs, a casualty of the PGA-players war who al- Shippingport Wins most abandoned the pro tour because of poor play, is on a comeback—a comeback that's beginning to shape up.

'My game started going bad right after the U.S. Open in 1966," Jacobs said. "I haven't played well since June of that year. My game was a little bad you can tell when it's happening—going into the Open.

"I was chairman of the tournament players' committee and right then all hell broke loose. With my game going bad, that just helped it along." But he started back this season and reached the high point of his comeback Friday when he valuted into the second-round lead of the heat-plagued $150,000 Philadelphia Golf Classic, shooting a 70 for 139. He held a two-stroke lead over six at 141. They are Lee Trevino, who took a double bogey six on the final hole for a 71; Grier Jones, 69; Dave Stockton, 70; Dean Refram, 70; Lou Graham, 73, and George Boutell, 70.

Annold Palmer moved into contention with a 69 despite heat he called "the worst I've seen since I've been playing golf." He was tied at 142—three ANSWER: Maybe the Viking ships were fragile-looking, but actually they were masterpieces of ship design and building, much more modern than other sailing ships of their period (700-1100 A.D.). Notice the low, lean shape, with bow and stern sharp at the water line, but lifting high

wave. If a big comber came racing up astern, the stern would rise above the water also. Being low to the water meant such ships would sail very well, because all the wind's force would act on the sail. The light hulls also means that oarsmen could handle them easily while going in and out of harbors, up rivers, or when the wind came from ahead. In such cases, they could drop both sail and mast and depend on the oars alone. In construction, too, these ships were far from fragile, for they were beautifully built of solid oak. Add the stern, rugged fighting spirit of
